

Questions

Husbands

1. As the master of the house (husband) have you articulated what is expected of the despot of the house (wife)? False, imaginary, unachievable, and unarticulated expectations can easily become foxes in a marriage.
2. When is the last time you praised your wife to her face? How often do you do this? The amount of praise you place upon her is typically commensurate with the amount of value you place upon her.
3. Is your value of women based upon charm and beauty? Do you have photos of beautiful women on your magazines, walls, computer screens, etc.? Do you comment on beautiful women? If so, what do you think you are telling your wife?
4. Will what you love about your wife now be the same thing you love about her when she is old and gray?

Wives

1. Do you look to the ways of your household? Do you smile at the future?
2. What does clothing of strength and dignity look like? Where do you buy it? How do you wear it?
3. An excellent wife has excellent speech. Her words are ones of wisdom and kindness. How does one impart wisdom and kindness with words? Are words sufficient?
4. Charm is deceitful and beauty is vain. How much time do you take working on your external beauty? How much time do you take working on your inward beauty?

Couples

1. In 1 Timothy 5:14, what does “keep house” mean? What does it entail?
2. In Titus 2:5, what does “workers at home” mean? What does it entail?
